LABOR DAY RACES PROMISE THRILLS

Four tin mares are frothing at the radiator, clamping at newly-ground valves and vibrating all over in their eagerness to get started in the Model T Motorcycle-Bicycle races at Riverside Park, Monday, Labor Day, beginning at two o'clock daylight time. Their drivers, Macchia and Merrill, Littlehale and Lowe have been grooming them for the prize money until Henry himself wouldn't recognize them as Fords, Littlehale and Lowe each confess to doing better than sixty. Macchia and Merrill just grin. They're not bragging about what's under their hoods.

The two boys on motorcycles who gave the crowd such a thrill at the recent Field Day, Starbird and Hodgkins, are expected back to add excitement in the motorcycle races. Others have been slow to enter but at the starter's gun on Labor Day there will be enough popping of exhausts to make one think he was in a battle.

Donald Brown is out to win the bike race again, and Al Chapman confesses he'd like to see the first prize close to. Other bicycle enthusiasts are waiting to see who else is going to before they sign up. Entries in the motorcycle and bicycle races are being held open to insure enough entries to put on a real race for the spectators.

The 44 Class Band is coming to Riverside Park, Labor Day. A concert will be given from 2 to 3.30 and the band will play during the races and to start the ball game off. A fine bunch of musicians they are and will lend a gala atmosphere to the day.

MIDDLE INTERVALE BUILDINGS BURNED MONDAY MORNING

Home of Ernest Buck Destroyed— Cattle, Hens, and Horse Saved —Mr. Buck Burned

The farm buildings at Middle Intervale known as the Sanborn place, owned by John H. Carter Jr., and occupied by Ernest Buck and family were destroyed in an early morning fire Monday. Mr. Buck was getting some gasoline for the washing machine and the gasoline became ignited, setting fire to the barn, from which it spread rapidly to the other buildings. Mrs. Buck and the four children escaped in their night clothes, practically everything in the house being lost. The stock in the barn was saved, but some 40 tons of hay and an automobile were destroyed. Mr. Buck was badly burned on his right arm.

Mr. and Mrs. Buck are well and widely known throughout this region and there is general and sincere sympathy for them in their misfortune. And this sympathy is being shown in deeds as well as words.

Before the smoking embers of their home had cooled plans were shaping for relief. A meeting of neighbors held Tuesday evening with Mrs. Grace Carter in the Carter Homestead received offers of furnishings from several friends and assurances of cooperation from the Bethel Farm Bureau and Grange. On Wednesday members of the Middle Intervale Farm Bureau began renovating the house known as the Caswell place where Mr. Buck is to live.

Meanwhile a representative committee of nine members with Dr. William R. Chapman as chairman and Henry H. Hastings as treasurer is at work securing contributions. This committee has arranged that contributions of money shall be passed to Mr. Hastings and —Continued on Page Eight—

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Aug. 27—Last Sunday in the month. A perfect day in every respect.

We surely had a most delightful rain this past week. The wells are full to overflowing.

The faithful ones have attended church. There are many reasons for so doing at any time. One of the best reasons is the formation of a good habit; and one seldom departed from when once firmly established.

During one of the rainy days Albert Felt came down from his home and spent several hours with his sister's family at Davis' home. Mr. Felt is, like his ancestors, a farmer, his home, the "Felt place," coming into his possession through his father, Granville Newton Felt and to his father through his grandfather, John Grover Felt, who made the home clearing something over a hundred years ago.

Friday morning Aug. 25 Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Davis and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Brown of Bryant Pond motored to Freeport to visit with relatives.

The weather was at fault that so many from South Woodstock failed to attend Bethel Fair which as reported from those who did attend was one of the best.

About thirty of the maids and young matrons of South Woodstock motored today to parts unknown for a camping trip, an annual pilgrimage under the care and chaperonage of Mary Hendrickson. There will be religious councils, field, playtime recreation, and rest far away from the haunts of man and the trials of a baking pan.

A large crowd of menfolk left South Woodstock long before light Sunday morning for Portland, where a fishing boat had been previously engaged for a trip to the fishing grounds. A lovely day spent brought the return party home at 9 p. m., their fishermen's luck not given. "Pat" Silver conveyed the crowd. Their slogan was: "A fish and a half gives all a good laugh. If we don't know how to swim we can all tumble in. Ye-ho. We are jolly good fellows."

An error last week concerning Myron Littlehale which should have read that he was visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Little-hale here. The William Littlehale mentioned being an uncle, a brother of his father, who lives on the Littlehale place, North Paris.

One of the best gardens in town is that of Edward Koskela (Finnish) who, with his interesting family, lives on the old Frank Dunham farm in the old Dunham school district, in South Woodstock. Mr. Koskela makes a good living, is a live wire in business matters, an up to date, all-round No. 1 farmer.

As yet no one has been permanently secured to care for Joseph Timothy Bryant, who certainly needs some one to help him as he is quite feeble and dependent. He wishes to stay through life on the old home place which has been handed down through ages in the Bryant family.

Did you ever read an advertisement calling the attention of the public to the fact that a person was wanted who was a good drinker. Well, neither did I. Smokers get by and drinkers also, but if the qualification called for experts at any positions would you expect the qualification of a drunkard to obtain that position?

Albany—Waterford

Cars driven by Orin Eames of South Portland and Harry B. McKee of North Lovell were in collision Sunday at the N. Waterford bridge near Libby's blacksmith shop. The cars were not seriously damaged and no one was hurt.

Three truck loads of boys from the C. C. C. camp at Stow were in this place Sunday and played baseball at Brown's field. The Waterford boys squeezed out a 6-3 victory. For several innings there was no score for either side. The game was enjoyed by a large crowd.

Mrs. Lillian Leadbetter of Swampscott, Mass., in visiting relatives in this place.

Eben Pike of West Paris was in this place Tuesday.

Walter Lord has been hauling hay from Bell hill and Blackguard to his place at North Waterford.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Grover were in Norway Tuesday on business.

Mrs. Herman Holt has returned to her home after spending the past week at Hanover.

W. E. Canwell is haying for Martens, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Little-

POULTRY DISEASE TESTS TO START SEPTEMBER 20

Testing Maine flocks of poultry for pullorum disease (White Diarrhea) will start about September 20 according to Dr. E. R. Hitchner of the College of Agriculture, Orono, who has general charge of this project.

Dr. Hitchner also announced some changes in the regulations governing the test. The price will be reduced this year to 7c per bird, provided (1) application is made on or before September 15, and (2) that flock owners are ready to test when the tester is working in a given area.

Unless the above conditions are met, special arrangements with the Department must be made and the charge will be actual cost but in no case less than 8c per bird. This is done, it is explained, to give those who cooperate fully the benefit of the lower cost which they help make possible.

Application blanks have been mailed by the county agent in each county to a large group of poultrymen. Anyone not having received such a form may obtain one by addressing their Farm Bureau Office or from the College of Agriculture at Orono.

Two hundred and eighteen flock owners in Maine had their flocks tested last year which included a total of 137,469 birds. Of this number, 180 flocks with 121,841 birds were accredited as free of pullorum disease. Of the total birds tested (137,553) only 757 were found to be infected, or .55%. This is the smallest percentage of infection found in any state doing this testing work.

NORTHWEST BETHEL

Master Irving Cummings, who has been spending the summer with his uncle, Albert Silver, went home Monday.

Mrs. Meade, Jr., of Greenwich, Conn., visited with Miss Marion Skillings last week end.

Miss Annie Hodgekin is spending the month of August with Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Wilson.

H. A. Skillings went to Hanover Tuesday to harvest oats for the Bartlett Brothers.

NEWRY

George Learned moved Roger Foster and family of Sunday River to one of Mrs. Carrie French's rents in the farm house. Mr. Foster is working for Marsh Hahtings at North Newry.

S. T. Tripp is making his rounds getting the schoolhouses ready for the Fall term which will begin soon.

F. I. French recently bought a calf of Pete LeMay and sold a cow and calf to the meat man.

Mr. Taylor of West Bethel was a caller Saturday at H. R. Powers'. Sunday callers at W. N. Powers' were Mrs. Harry Rand, her son Delbert, wife and baby, all from Dixfield.

A party from New York is staying at the Bond farm; a gentleman and wife, Miss Wiggins, and Miss Madeline Bond just home from a girl's camp at Casco. The four are here for a two weeks' stay.

Mr. Bond, who has been here for a while, will go to New York the first of the week.

Mrs. H. E. Harlow was a caller Saturday at F. I. French; W. N. Powers' and H. R. Powers'.

H. R. Powers and family were in Bridgton last Sunday, visiting relatives.

UPTON

The three-act comic drama which was presented by members of the Grange last Saturday night was a great success. A large crowd was in attendance. The orchestra from Berlin brought a crowd with them. There were also carloads from Errol, N. H., Andover, Bethel, and Newry Corner.

Miss Gladys Doughty, the Vacation Bible School teacher from Everett, Mass., has finished her work here. She had the closing exercises at the church Sunday morning and an exhibition of the children's work at the library building.

The Kenyon and Nutting families have returned to their homes.

Perry Judkins and family of Andover were week end guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Judkins.

Mrs. Cleo Brown, Miss Letta Brown and Madeline Barnett have gone on a camping trip up the lake.

T. A. Durkee's big house boat was nearly wrecked by an explosion when the boys who were working on it lighted a match.

ROBINSON C. TOBEY, Secretary of State.

Those in favor of any, or all, of the following proposed questions will place a cross (X) in each, or any, of the squares marked "YES" devoted to the question, or questions, for which they desire to vote; those opposed will place a cross (X) in the opposite square or squares marked "NO."

LIST OF QUESTIONS

AMENDMENT NO. 1
YES ☐ NO ☐
"Shall the constitution be amended as proposed by a resolution of the legislature authorizing the use of voting machines in elections?"
By Chapter 81 of the Resolves of 1933, it is proposed to further amend Article II of the Constitution, by adding thereto the following section, to wit:
"Sec. 5. Voting machines, or other mechanical devices for voting, may be used at all elections under such regulations as may be provided by law, provided, however, the right of secret voting shall be preserved."

YES ☐ NO ☐
"Shall the constitution be amended as proposed by a resolution of the legislature providing for the raising of the state debt limit, for exceeding loans from the state from the municipal debt limit and for the issuance of bonds, the proceeds of which are to be disbursed directly or by loans to cities, towns and plantations for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof, and for no other purpose?"
By Chapter 203 of the Resolves of 1933, it is proposed to amend Article IX of the Constitution, by adding thereto the following section, to wit:
"Sec. 2. The state under proper enactment of the legislature, may incur its bonds not to exceed the amount of $2,000,000 payable within 10 years, at a rate of interest not exceeding 5% per annum, for the purpose of providing for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof, and for no other purpose. Said bonds shall be sold and the proceeds thereof, and when paid at maturity or when redeemed, may be expended for such purposes only."
It is also proposed that Section 14 of said Article IX, as amended by Article XXXI of the Constitution, shall be further amended to read as follows:
"Sec. 14. The legislature shall not create any debt or liability of the state, or of any political subdivision thereof, which shall singly, or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, exceed at any one time the amount of $2,000,000, except for the purposes of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:
"No city or town having less than 4000 inhabitants, according to the last census taken by the United States, shall hereafter create any debt or liability, singly or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, except for the purpose of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:
"No city or town having less than 4000 inhabitants, according to the last census taken by the United States, shall hereafter create any debt or liability, singly or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, except for the purpose of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:
"No city or town having less than 4000 inhabitants, according to the last census taken by the United States, shall hereafter create any debt or liability, singly or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, except for the purpose of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:
"No city or town having less than 4000 inhabitants, according to the last census taken by the United States, shall hereafter create any debt or liability, singly or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, except for the purpose of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:
"No city or town having less than 4000 inhabitants, according to the last census taken by the United States, shall hereafter create any debt or liability, singly or in the aggregate, with previous debts or liabilities hereof, except for the purpose of building state highways, intrastate, interstate and international bridges, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, or for the purpose of providing for the payment of a bonus to Maine soldiers and sailors in the war with Germany, or for the purpose of building and maintaining public wharves and for the establishment of adequate port facilities in the state of Maine; or for the emergency relief of conditions threatening the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of the state or any political subdivision thereof; but this amendment shall not be construed to refer to any money that has been, or may be deposited with the state or the government of the United States, or to any fund which the state shall hold in trust for any Indian tribe."

And it is also proposed that Article XXII of the Constitution, as amended by Article XXXI, shall be amended to read as follows:

The ball game alone is worth the price of admission. Early in the afternoon "Speed" Eames, drug store cowboy de luxe, got the idea he could get together enough married men, who were good at catching things out of the air that their wives threw together, and call them a baseball team. "Bob" Littlehale, not to be outdone, gathered a team of college rah-rah boys who he thought played plug-pug so well they could be taught to hit a baseball. The results in both cases are open to doubt. The first game fell to the collegians. The married men brought their wives and daughters to the second game and while the rah-rahers' boys were straightening their ties and neck ribbons and eyeing the sidelines the benedicts got a victory. So the Labor Day game is far blood and the team that makes the most errors ought to win this time.

Manager Eames gives the following Benedict line-up subject to additions and omissions, the weather, and the nine gods of luck: Doc Wilson, pitcher; Paddy Robertson, catcher; Wh. Howe, 1st base; Ralph Young, shortstop; Lucien Little-hale, 3d base; Jimmy Troteau, center field; Alton Carroll, left field;
Speed Eames, 2d base; "Finger Pointe" Lathrop, right field.

Manager Littlehale gives the Collegian line-up thusly: Goddard shortstop; Hood, 1st base; Little hale, pitcher; Twaddle, center field;
Tine, 2d base; Rowe, right field;
Bartlett, catcher; Wight, Tibbets, left field; Eames, third base.

There will be a refreshment stand operated by the Bethel Legion Post, a chairplac and possible other concessions.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON (By REV. GEORGE HENRY)

LIP SERVICE

The story is told of Walter Scott, who was an associate of Campbell in the early days, that he visited the Brush Run church upon one occasion. The meeting began in the early evening and continued well into the night. Nearly every male had a lengthy speech to make.
Scott was becoming weary. At last the elder presiding asked Scott if he would say a few words. Solemnly he spoke: "The Bible tells me that the Church is the body of Christ, and that, like the human body, it has a great variety of members, but this church seems to be all mouth." I am afraid some of our churches are like that today.
"Lip service" will never get you anywhere. The church needs hands, feet, eyes, ears. Hands to help lift the burden from drooping shoulders, feet to speed on errands of mercy, eyes to see the distress and sorrow in the world, ears to hear the cry for help in time of need.
The mouth is more apt to go wrong than any other member of the body.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Howard Thurston, who has successfully completed his First Class requirements was presented with a first Class Scout pin at Scout meeting.

At the next Scout meeting the Fall program begins and plans are being formulated for a very busy Fall and Winter.

Scouts all over the country are supporting the Four Year Plan which meets the approval of Pres.
Roosevelt. The plan is to reach every eligible boy and present a constructive plan of Scouting to them.

The troop was invited to the home of Dr. and Mrs. William R.
Chapman last Monday evening to spend a social hour. Mrs. Chapman royally entertained the troop with several humorous readings and also gave a moral lesson to the Troop using the regulator of watch as her topic. To present her idea more forcefully she composed the following excellent verse:

A Watch Inside
You have a WATCH inside of you.
A watch that goes on ticking too.
No one can hear or know it's there.
Except yourself, unless you care.
It tells the time things should be done.

It tells you when to have some fun.
And if you keep it clean and true.
It always will be helping you.
But keep the REGULATOR free.
And listen to it's every plea.
For it will warn you every time.
If you will only treat it fine.
And realize that it is there,
To help you conquer every care.
"His God who put that watch in you
And keeps it going strong and true
You must be careful every day.
And listen to all it has to say.
So you may never go astray.
But grow in wisdom all life's way.

With the serving of cake, and a cream the social hour was exceeded.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Swan Jr. are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. James Swan have returned to their home here after spending a number of weeks visiting their son in Apponaug, N. I.

Ona and Laura Yates of Norway spent a few days recently with their cousin, Mrs. William S. Hastings.

A number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs.
Florence Hastings Saturday evening, the occasion being Mrs. Hastings' birthday, also Mrs. Fanny Bartlett's. A fine time was enjoyed. Refreshments of candy, pie, corn, and a pretty birthday cake were served. Six tables of cards were played.

CHAPMAN DAY CONCERT AT EAST- ERN MUSIC CAMP

Filled to Capacity for Closing concert of Season—Splendid Program—Ovation to Dr.
and Mrs. Chapman

Governor Louis J. Brann paid tribute to the Eastern Music camp in a brief address given at the annual Chapman Day concert Sunday afternoon, attended by 4,000 people. Arriving shortly after the concert had commenced, Governor and Mrs. Brann were seated on the spacious porch of the bowl with the orchestra, the all-Maine chorus, the guest artists and Dr. and Mrs. William Chapman.

Governor Brann spoke of Maine's fortune in possessing so great a gift to the State as the Eastern Music Camp and of its indebtedness to those sponsoring so great an undertaking. He also paid tribute to Dr. Chapman referring to his valuable contribution he has made to music in Maine for a good many consecutive years.

Henry F. Merrill of Portland, president of the Eastern Music camp corporation, announced that in spite of the struggle made to finance the camp this season, it was at a recent meeting of the trustees that it will continue next year. He spoke with greatest enthusiasm of the work being done at Music Camp which Dr. Walter Rosch called "a modern miracle in the woods of Maine," and made earnest appeal for continued financial support throughout the year.

He also made reference to the assistance in promoting the carrying on the work of the camp rendered by Mrs. Dorothy H. Mendenhall, the executive secretary, whose enthusiasm and energy by a visit to the one other camp in the country at Ingham, Michigan, furnished inspiration for the inception of the camp. Mr. Merrill urged all who possibly do so, to subscribe advance for season tickets, which are in charge of Mrs. Mendenhall.

The program, conducted by Dr. Chapman, with Wilfred Tremblay of Portland, formerly of Lewiston, at the piano, opened with "The Fort Astoria March," Dr. Chapman's composition played by the orchestra, and this was followed by the Hallelujah Chorus of Handel's Messiah by chorus and orchestra, given with a power and fervor under Dr. Chapman's leadership, recalling the Festival days of this was always the theme.

The first soloist was William V. Miley of Portland, whose splendid voice was heard at its best in two numbers: "Every Valley" by Handel and "Where'er You Walk."

The second selection by the orchestra was the Minuet from Bizet's "L'Arlesienne," played with amazing technique by musicians, few of them over 16 years of age. Their next number was Tchaikovsky's "Overture Solenne, 1812," a most difficult composition for even an adult experienced orchestra. They played it with skill and artistry and received smiling tribute from their conductor and prolonged applause from the audience. Dr. Chapman received a great ovation for his masterly conducting of this difficult overture.

Erie V. Renwick of Auburn sang "Il Balen" from Il Trovatore and in spite of a cold from which he suffered, his tones rang through the grove, clear, rich, sonorous. He responded to an encore with the Toreador song, given in English.

Rossini's "Inflammatus" from Stabat Mater was sung by Mrs. Gladys Russell Cook, gifted Portland soprano and the chorus, was one of the most beautiful and impressive features of the program. Although she was applauded insistently Mrs. Cook refused to appear for a second number.

One of the fine features of the afternoon was the Prologue to "Pagliacci," rendered by Royal Dadmun, New York concert artist of note, who has been named among the foremost baritones in the country. His voice, equally pleasing in dramatic or lyric numbers, was charming in the old song, "Flow gently Sweet Afton," which he came back to sing. He was accompanied by Miss Madeline Meredith.

Miss Lucille Potter, a coloratura soprano whose tones are sweet, clear as a bell and often remind one of Lily Pons, sang three numbers: "Carnival of Venice" by Proch, "I'll Be a Butterfly" by Bailey, and the third—another fitting melody, "The Gypsy and the Bird," with flute accompaniment by James Pappout, soloist of the Music Camp faculty.

The ever-popular sextet from Lucia di Lammermoor was sung by Mrs. Cook, Miss Margaret Carter of Bethel, W. V. Bradley and Elsie H. Smith of Portland, Erie Renwick and John D. McCarthy of Lewiston.

The inspirational Sousa march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," by the band and the "Star Spangled Banner" by band, orchestra and chorus brought the Chapman Day concert to a glorious finale.

Prior to the closing numbers both Dr. and Mrs. Chapman expressed their pleasure in the large audience present and their appreciation to chorus and soloists for their cooperation in making the day a grand success. Mrs. Chapman, who has been president of the Rubinstein Club in New York, the oldest woman's choral organization in the United States for 25 years, is as well beloved in musical circles in the State of Maine as is her distinguished husband. Both were extended a real ovation from the stage and the audience alike.

Dr. Chapman has received an invitation to be guest conductor for a series of concerts to be given this winter by the Manhattan Symphony orchestra of New York. This orchestra organized in 1922 is composed of 100 fine musicians.

MRS. CLARE H. HARVEY

Mrs. Clare H. Harvey, widow of Edward S. Harvey, died Saturday morning at the Augusta General Hospital following surgical treatment, at the age of 73 years.

She was born in Stillwater, Minnesota, in 1860 the daughter of Maine pioneers to the Western country, and following the death of her mother, returned as a girl with her father to his native state. She spent most of her girlhood in Rumford and then went West again where she was employed on several newspapers and publications as a compositor. She also taught school in Omaha, Neb.

She was married in Milwaukee and later returned to Maine and for several years was employed in the office of the Bethel News. About 25 years ago, Mrs. Harvey came to Augusta and purchased the Maine Farmer from the late Samuel Manley. After continuing that publication for about ten years, Mrs. Harvey sold her interest to W. H. Gannett.

Mrs. Harvey is survived by one son, Edwin L. Harvey who lives in New York City where he is editor of the Fox Movietone News, the pioneer sound newsreel.

Funeral services were held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at the office of the Bethel News. About 25 years ago, Mrs. Harvey came to Augusta and purchased the Maine Farmer from the late Samuel Man-

Shower Given Miss Knights

A very pleasant occasion was the shower given Miss Alice Knights by Miss Irene Ames at her home on Wednesday evening, Aug. 23.

The house was prettily decorated with a large white wedding bell suspended from the ceiling in the living-room and green and white streamers leading from it to the sides of the room.

The guest of honor received many useful and beautiful gifts, presented in a small cart drawn by Alice Ames, the little niece of the hostess dressed as a bride, and by Richard Cole, the small brother of Miss Knights. Dainty refreshments were served.

Among those present besides the hostess and her mother, Mrs. Alton Ames were Mrs. Matie Ames, Mrs. Flora K. Cole, Mrs. Marguerite Ervin, Mrs. Ruth Tyler, Mrs. Harriet Farrington, the Misses Alice and Evelyn Knights, Eunice Salla and Evelyn Howe.

Cards and guessing contests were enjoyed.

Miss time came when proper clerks had reached the end of their endurance. Geoff tucked his car.

"You've had no dinner," she said. "I don't have you."

"I don't want any. I'm too tired."

made no answer but present and stopped the car before a tree.

"I can't eat, Geoff--truly I can't," he begged. "Just give me, I've earned a favor."

"You thought, haven't I?" she forced herself to taste it.

"I thought he ordered; another, until the color came to her cheeks and he looked less tired."

"I wish you didn't keep shop. It takes all the joy out of the holiday for you."

to the packages and candles and the flowers and candles as much as any of you. I got a present for you, Cyndie."

"You, Geoff? Well, I have you, too. A nice one."

"I hope you'll think mine is a nice one."

"I hesitated then said swiftly, 'Why can't we always be like this? I--I hate being with you.'"

"I haven't quarreled since then," she said. "Her voice was very low and her eyes were friendly and I was both then and now."

"I know he was treacherous and dangerous but he had a heart. He was wholly on Tenny's side. That you--sent Sutton."

"I tried to pretend tonight," she said. "I wouldn't have."

Knowledge Breeds Confidence

The more good things the public knows about your business the greater will be its confidence in your methods and the merchandise you sell.

It is only human to prefer doing business with those you know and respect. The quickest way of spreading information about your business, and thus creating confidence, is through the medium of newspaper advertising.

Thoroughly covering the territory from which comes nearly all of Bethel's retail trade, this paper is a necessary part of every sound merchandising program. Use it generously to spread knowledge and increase profits.

given Tenny up, of course, but I was glad—not to be engaged to Ben Sutton. I learned once and for all time, Geoff, that I can never marry a man except for one reason: not for financial ease, not because he's kind, not because I like and respect him. Those things, I discovered, aren't enough. When I marry—if I marry," she amended with a faint smile, "it will be because I love my man so deeply, so truly, so entirely, that I can't live without him."

The words thrilled Geoff. The little cafe became to him a place of drama. He felt humble, this young man who was learning for the first time what love meant. He had thought he knew when Cynthia came home from the hospital, but now he realized with a touch of awe that to love and be loved by Cynthia Aylesbury would be an experience so different from the superficial, ephemeral emotion which went by the name of love with most of his generation that it would set a man apart from his kind. With this knowledge came depression. His self-confidence, his light-hearted plans to storm the castle of Cynthia's heart vanished. If he was ever to win this sapphire-eyed girl he must fight for every step of the ground he won.

He accepted the challenge doggedly. Only his mother could have told Cynthia the fiery ambition combined with stern determination which lay behind that acceptance. Christmas Day—Geoff's first Christmas in the Cary house—passed off merrily. They were having breakfast, Marguerite's fluffy biscuits and tiny brown sausages were neglected while the piles of daintily wrapped packages at each plate were opened.

Cynthia's present to Geoff was the book he had coveted in the Odds and Ends along with a companion volume which he had long sought. Both were now out of print and Geoff was delighted with them quite apart from his pleasure in Cynthia's thoughtfulness toward his needs.

He had selected his own gift for her with much care, deciding at last on a necklace of carved coral, trusting that she would not realize the costliness of its exquisite work. That she did realize it, her first glance of protest attested; but she thanked him prettily and that evening he had the joy of seeing it around her throat in combination with the simple white dress she wore to a Christmas party.

Miss Nona as usual was deluged with gifts. Over one of them Cary raised derisive brows. Doctor Bligh had sent her a wicker basket filled with blooming begonias, their honest pink somewhat resembling the color in his own cheeks.

"Ah! We have a romance brewing," said the graceless Cary. "I thought Doc was making a good many calls while Cynthia was sick, and that it was odd he always timed them to coincide with your visits at the hospital!"

"Hush, you bad boy!" Miss Nona was unperturbed. The doctor's flowers were amply supplemented by roses, poinsettias and scarlet carnations from other friends.

To Tenny the day was something out of a fairy tale. From that first waking moment when she reached for the stocking Cynthia had filled and hung on her bedpost, to the other moment, when exhausted with sheer felicity she fell asleep in Geoff's arms and was carried upstairs and undressed by Cynthia without waking she existed in a delirium of joy that Geoff found infinitely touching. It spoke so loudly of other Christmases spent in the forced cheer of deserted schools or in bare hotels with a puzzled and anxious mother. The child seemed to carry about with her the realization of what had threatened the gladness of this day. Once she paused with her arms full of the gifts she was hugging to her heart and said to Cynthia: "If you'd sent me back to boarding school, Cynthia, I'd be crying now instead of laughing. Did you know that?"

"But I never thought of sending you away, dear."

"And if you did send me," the child insisted, "Geoff would have come and got me, wouldn't you Geoff?"

"You know I would," he replied with significant emphasis, and reassured, she went back to her play.

At dinner Flossie and Cary made an announcement.

"Look here, folks," Cary began abruptly. "This wife of mine insists that we've honeymooned here long enough. She thinks it's high time we set up housekeeping for ourselves."

"Leave here?" Miss Nona exclaimed in dismay. "Cary, you can't—you simply mustn't!"

Cynthia laid her hand over her mother's. "Wait, dear, and hear what Flossie says about it."

Flossie's cheeks flushed brightly. "We've figured it all out, Cary and I. We can get a one-room and kitchenette for thirty-five dollars. It isn't in such a grand neighborhood but that won't matter. It's near Cary's work. And after we pay our first wife's alimony, we'll still have enough to live on if we're careful. We've loved staying here, Miss Nona, but after all we're married and we ought to keep house for ourselves," she finished reasonably.

Geoff was chuckling over the reference to "our first wife." From the very beginning Flossie had accepted that almost mythical person with composure. Her common-sense attitude toward life in general delighted Geoff. Cary's sensitiveness revolved no encouragement from Flossie. The graceful avoidance of money discussion which was the rule in the household simply didn't exist for her.

Miss Nona and the Captain never ceased to be shocked by her direct speech, but Cynthia had recognized it for the fine thing it was and upheld her sister-in-law at all times.

She approved now of her plan.

Flossie's right Miss Nona. It's time the bride and groom retired to their own domain."

Miss Nona's handkerchief came out. "Have you naturally selected an apartment, Cary dear?"

"Selected it? We've paid the first month's rent," he said proudly. "Trust this hard-boiled wife of mine to clinch a thing before I can slide out from under."

That, Geoff told himself, would be the keystone on which the Cary Aylesburys' happiness would be built. Flossie would always be there to keep Cary from sliding out from under.

"It was a lucky day for Cary when he married his 'Baby,'" he said to Cynthia when they were driving back from the inspection of the new home. Miss Nona refused to accompany them and the Captain had stayed home to keep her company. Flossie and Cary rode in the latter's disreputable car. "I shouldn't wonder at all if she turns matchmaker, marries off 'our first wife' and so rides Cary of the alimony."

Cynthia assented soberly. "Flossie is a dear! It's smart of her to move Cary into a home of his own, even if it's only one room. It'll give him some responsibility for the first time in his life."

"Will Miss Nona be upset about it long, do you think?" he asked a little anxiously.

"Oh, no. It's the first break in the family and naturally it hurts her. But she'll get over it. Miss Nona's disposition is so sweet," said her laughter, "that nothing upsets her very long."

The dreary and uneventful January that Cynthia had feared was broken by two events: the arrival of Mrs. Ensloe for a visit and the Captain's death.

The one preceded the other by ten days. Miss Nona looked up from her morning mail with an exclamation of pleasure.

"Enloe is coming to Denver! Geoff, your mother is coming! But of course you have a letter, too. She says her book is finished and she's rather at loose ends now and she wants to see Geoff—and all of us."

She was quite flushed with delight over the announcement. She told oratories as them served. Moments of her childhood, and Cynthia smiled to recognize in Geoff his mother's own decisiveness and quick formulation of plans.

Geoff himself was divided between delight and apprehension at the prospect of his mother's presence in the Cary house. He longed to see her, but he feared her accurate analysis of the situation here, the blunt frankness of her speech.

He need not have worried. Mrs. Ensloe knew Miss Nona of old and only listened with indulgent amusement when her friend's gentle impracticability was to the fore.

She arrived early one bitter January morning. Geoff, who had gone to the train to meet her endeavored to prepare her on the way home for what she would find.

"I wrote you Cary and Flossie have left," he said. "Miss Nona hasn't got over it yet. But Flossie's a sensible little thing and it was the wisest possible action—taking an apartment of their own."

Mrs. Ensloe looked at him and smiled. "You're head-over-heels in the family affairs, aren't you, Geoff?"

He grinned. "They have sort of got me," he acknowledged. "Their problems and conversation are as interesting as a play. You wait—you'll find yourself involved, too."

And soon Fannie Ensloe was admitting the truth of this. Whether it was the Cary charm, or the unusuality of the household, or the susceptibility of the outsiders, sooner or later most people who had anything to do with the Cary Aylesbury connection found themselves swept into the current which moved there.

Major Ingham was an interesting example of this. A widower of two years' standing, he had known Miss Nona all her life. Cynthia's illness had shown him her mother at her best. He still drew down his bushy eyebrows and frowned at her helplessness in money matters, but it was a frown now tempered by a smile which was almost tender. He made Tenny an excuse to call frequently at the house. To be sure he was as likely as not to drop in when the child was at school, but neither he nor Miss Nona appeared to regard that as important.

Elsie Dunsmore was another who thought of the family's affairs as her own.

"Cynthia," her anxious voice might say over the telephone, "I see where those Dedham boys your mother was wishing for are on sale at that little pottery shop on Arapahoe street tomorrow at an awfully low price! Shall I come down half an hour early and get her one?"

The first time Mrs. Ensloe found herself knitting her brows over the problem of Marguerite's habit of leaving the milk on the back porch until it froze and burst the bottle, she lay back in her chair and laughed.

"You Carys," she said to Miss Nona. "There's something about you that makes everything you say and do important. I really came out here to see what you'd done to Geoff. He's a foolish person, a kind one, but I've never known him before to get all worked up over little girls' school shoes or early closing hours on Saturday for gift shops."

"Geoff's a dear," said Miss Nona complacently. "I'll confess to you, Enloe, I hoped at first he and Cynthia would fall in love with each other. But they got off on the wrong foot somehow, and it's been all I could do to keep the peace between them sometimes."

Her friend gave her a sharp glance. She knew that her son's heart was given to the small, blue-eyed girl who treated him with a casual sort of friendliness. She discovered within herself an unsuspected jealousy of Cynthia. Absorbed in her husband as she had been, there was always the consciousness of the boy's adoration of his mother. Unknown to herself she had valued that adoration counted on it. Now that the book was done the last service she could render to him and was completed, she had tried to open her heart to her only son.

And now it was too late; Geoff had only the remnant of his solace, his attention, to give to his mother where once she had had the full measure. If Cynthia said something to him in a little confidential aside at breakfast, Geoff went off whistling. If she was preoccupied and silent, he departed for the laboratory as though he had just heard of the death of his best friend.

"A salutary lesson to mothers who put their children second in their hearts," Mrs. Ensloe told herself, cocking her eyebrows in the whimsical way Miss Nona remembered. "She who will not when she may, when she will she shall have nay' and that applies to mothers as well as to sweethearts, apparently."

She disciplined herself by making friends with Cynthia. She was apt to turn up at the gift shop at unexpected times and stand watching the girl's competent handling of the few customers who strayed in at this time of the year.

"You need more space here," she said abruptly one afternoon. "If you'd branch out—carry a stock of baby things, and toys—you wouldn't have to live through these frequent slumps."

Cynthia nodded. "I've thought of that. I've even made inquiries about renting the shop next door and talked to the landlord about taking out the partition and throwing them both in one."

"He's willing?"

"Oh, yes, he's willing, all right. But it would raise the rent to a figure I don't dare handle and then there'd be the added cost of goods."

"H'm," said her godmother; and the next day she remarked offhandedly: "I wouldn't mind being a silent partner in this shop, my dear. Suppose I supply sufficient capital to enlarge the place and then take a share of the profits."

Cynthia thought it over. "I'd rather not," she decided. "It's sweet of you to suggest it, but it's been my own from the very first—when I had no clerk and had to sweep out and unpack the stock and everything. I—I have a sort of pride in building it up myself."

Mrs. Ensloe gave a quick nod. "I understand, Cynthia. There's nothing in the world as sweet as a success you've built up yourself—unless it's something shared with the one you love," she added wistfully. "Cynthia, be your godmother. And, being your godmother, perhaps you won't mind if I ask you a few questions."

Cynthia started but the first she made her jump with surprise.

"How do you feel toward Geoff?"

"How do I feel toward him? To her fury the hot color rose in her face. She could feel it, wave on wave of it flooding her cheeks, beating in her temples. "Why, I like Geoff, of course. Just at first we didn't get along very well—He behaved horridly to me during the first few months he was here."

"I can't think of Geoff behaving horridly to a girl," his mother mused. "To be sure, he's had to spend a great deal of his time side-stepping them, but he's always been nice to them when he was with them."

Cynthia's lips curled. He's a woman's man."

"For shame, you little pepper-pot! You know very well he's nothing of the kind, but with his good looks—you'll admit he's good looking?"

"Oh, yes," she said composedly. "Geoff's very good looking."

"And with his money you know he has money of his own from his grandfather?"

"I don't know it no." Her tone added: "It wouldn't have made any difference if I had."

THE FOOL'S PRAYER

Edward Rowland Sill
The royal feast was done; the King Sought some new sport to banish care,
And to his jester cried: "Silly Fool, Kneel now, and make for us a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the mocking court before;
They could not see the bitter smile
Behind the painted grin he wore.

He bowed his head, and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose: "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"No pity, Lord, could change a heart
From red with wrong to white as wool;
The Lord must heal the sin; but,
Lord,

Be merciful to me, a fool."

"Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay;
Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away."

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire, Go crushing blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands
we thrust
Among the heart-strings of a friend."

"The ill-timed truth we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung!
The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it had rung!"

"Our faults no tenderness should ask,
The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;
But for our blunders—oh, in shame
before the eyes of heaven we fall."

"Earth bears no balsam for mistakes;
Men crown the knave, and crown the pious EAOI N scourge the fool
That did his will; but Thou, O
Lord,

Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed; in silence rose
The King, and sought his gardens
cool,
And walked apart, and murmured
low,
"Be merciful to me, a fool!"

Middle Intervale, Bethel

Clarence E. Maine and Mrs. Maine of West Warwick, R. I., with their daughter Arline and son Carleton, when on their way to the Dolly Copp camping reservation near Mt. Washington, camped for one night near Camp "Rhody" for a brief visit with Rev. and Mrs. William T. Green.

Rev. Arthur W. Swift, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dover, Mass., and members of his family called at Camp "Rhody" early in August.

THREE FIRES IN RUMFORD HOUSE

Within two hours Wednesday, Rumford firemen were called three times for fires in Dr. Thibodeau's home. Although the cause was not determined it is suspected to be the work of a "firebug." The upper floor was damaged by fire a month ago.

BETHEL FAIR TO BE CONCLUDED SEPT. 15-16

Popular Dancer

Charlie "Bud" Dolbler of Kingfield put on a tap and clog dance before the grandstand that pleased the crowd, who applauded him back for more dancing. "Bud" is the only "Dancing Horse Jockey" in the game, which is a sort of hobby with him (besides some work) and he is going to put his act on at several of the Maine fairs. He is in the stable of Monte Gerow, who trains S. J. Luce's stable at Farmington. Oxford County folks will remember Mr. Dolbler as a dancing school teacher, being at West Paris last year and also being with the Ethel May Shorey company last year. He also is a crack trap drummer, playing in several Maine orchestras and was at St. Petersburg, Fla., broadcasting through station WFLA, but of all his various talents he likes horse racing the best.

MIDDLE INTERVALE FARM BUILDINGS BURNED MONDAY

Gifts of furniture, bedding, rugs, cooking utensils, home canned goods, etc., shall be left at the Red Cross headquarters.

Here is a fine opportunity for every home to show now the neighborly spirit by sharing in helping this esteemed family to begin housekeeping anew. Further information concerning contributions may be obtained from Miss Grace Carter and Mrs. Fannie Carter at Middle Intervale.

Contributions Solicited

Dear Neighbors:

A sad and overwhelming disaster has come to Ernest Buck of Middle Intervale, one of our neighbors, wiping out his home and household effects. Nothing from the house was saved from the severe fire which swept so suddenly, the family barely escaped with their lives, having only their night clothes. Mr. Buck was severely burned on his right arm. They need immediate aid, money, clothing, furniture of all kinds, cooking utensils, everything useful for a family of four boys, ranging in age from fifteen to two years. A house is available nearby, but furnishings necessary to existence there are needed at once. Kindly send today if possible to the Red Cross Rooms, marked for Ernest Buck's family, any donation you care to give. A committee will assist in collecting the cash necessary for immediate relief, and will deliver the amount to Henry H. Hastings, who will act as treasurer for the fund.

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Dr. S. S. Greenleaf was at Wonalancet, N. H., Monday night, called there to attend some of the dogs of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition. Mrs. Leon Bartlett and Mrs. Harry Bartlett of Berlin, N. H., and Dayton Bartlett of Boston called on Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kimball last Thursday.

Mrs. Laura McKeene, Mrs. Ray Hutchinson and daughter Barbara and Ernest Cross of Portland were Sunday guests of C. F. Morgan and Mrs. Mabel Allen.

Dr. Greenleaf was in Farmington Wednesday. Mrs. Greenleaf returned home with him after a two weeks' vacation spent with relatives and friends there.

Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Hutchins started Tuesday on the return trip to their home in Detroit, Mich., after a week's visit with his mother, Mrs. J. S. Hutchins.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson, Patricia, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gorman and Elizabeth attended the Edwards Reunion at Crescent Lake Sunday.

Mrs. A. Van, Miss Lucia Van, Harry Carter and Miss Frances F. Carter were among those who attended the Chapman Day program at the Eastern Maine Music Camp Sunday.

Stanley Allen, Misses Hermoine Hutchins, Betty Edwards, Mary Tibbets, Elizabeth Bean, and Kathryn Brink are at Camp Medomac, Washington, Maine, as delegates from the Comrades of the Way and Girl Reserves of Gould Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley F. Bartlett of Lewiston spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. King Bartlett of Locke Mills and Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Farwell of Bethel. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett sailed from New York Tuesday, on a two weeks' cruise to Spanish Honduras.

COURAGE

Seems in itself worth while!"

HERE AND THERE IN MAINE

The body of Sule Warren, 26, of East Waldo, was found hanging over the side of a sailing dory in Haven Pond, Waldo, Sunday night. Two companions were missing and it is feared that they were drowned.

The Barker mill at Auburn has been purchased by George Laganas, a shoe manufacturer of Lowell, Mass. It is reported that 1200 people will be employed with a weekly payroll of $18,000. $50,000 will be spent in alterations on the building. The property was owned by the Central Maine Power Company.
